Acknowledgements

I extend my sincere gratitude to my respected teacher Pushpa Raj Acharya who provided constructive suggestions and assistance, as a dissertation supervisor, to lead this study to the existing shape.

I am equally grateful to Dr. Krishna Chandra Sharma, Head of the central department of English for his provision of doing this job to me. I express my sincere thanks to all the teachers of the Central Department of English for their timely and warm cooperation directly or indirectly for the accomplishment of this dissertation.

I am much grateful to my parents Bishnu Pd. Rijal and Ram Maya Rijal who paved a way for me to achieve this goal. Similarly, my thanks go to those who sacrificed themselves into the trenches and fierce battle for the sake of new hope and there by making the nation a land of peace and prosperity, always inspiring me to do some thing for the people's war.

Finally, but not bit less, thanks are imparted to all the staffs of Chandeswory Higher Secondary School, Nuwakot who always inspire me to do some extra job and always provide warm assistance.

Abstract

Capitalism, in Upton Sinclair's The Jungle, causes the extremity of exploitations that Rudkus faces time and again in the vast jungle of people in Chicago Stockyard. As his consciousness rises, Rudkus's awareness of being victimized leads him towards revolution, first by himself, then by organizing people against the capitalism as he has no alternative but a socialist revolution.
