ABSTRACT

This study was conducted with the title of impacts of socio-economic status of women on their decision making on Tirhut Rula Municipality Diman Village, Saptari district. The main objectives of the study were to find out to study women's participation in community groups and income generally activities socio-economic status of women. The study was 180 households in Tirhut rural municipality Diman village( ward no.4). Interview schedule was used as the tool for data collection. Descriptive research design was followed to complete the study. Village/ward was selected purposefully and sample was selected by using simple random sampling method.

According to the study, it was found that 31.1 percent respondents are uneducated/ illiterate only 41.1 percent respondents are got lower education. All most all the respondents have.

It was also found that almost all the respondents visited door to door. All most all the respondents have information about households person's only few women have land ownership in small size and house ownership. Only very few women have property rights.

It was also found that most women are unemployed. In spite of their unemployment, they are quite busy in their household activities and agriculture. There is also women's participation in development committees especially in women's quotas but they are not provided important role to work for the society. The role of women in decision making is highly remarkable. Despite their active role and involvement in decision making, they can not decide themselves on marriage ceremony and selling and purchasing land and house.

Impression, In fact, Income, employment, education age, family structure and marital status are the influential factors of decision making.
