Acknowledgement

First and foremost, I am beholden to my supervisor Dr. Youba Raj Luintel for frequent guidance and support who encouraged me in each and every step while pursuing thesis research under his supervision.

I am also indebted to the people of Chuladhunga, Panchawati Udayapur, especially women respondents, FGD participants, key informants who participated enthusiastically during my endless queries with a wonderful generosity and patience. In such way I am indebted to Mr. Dik Bahadur Gurmachha Magar as main key informant who took me to the main study area for observation and provided me all the information and other logistic help during my data collection period with good hospitality.

I am equally thankful to Prof. Dr Tulsi Ram Panday, the head of the Central Department of Sociology for final approval and critical comments for the final submission of my thesis.

At last but not least, I would like to express my utmost gratitude and appreciation to my father and Mr. Dan Bahadur Pulami and my wife Tika Kumari Magar without whom I would not have been able to complete my Masters Degree whose great source of inspiration and cooperation always encourages me to step forward in my life. I am grateful and thankful to those who are unknowingly involved during preparing this dissertation.
