ABSTRACT

The present research entitled Autonomous Learning Activities of the Students for Developing their Speaking Skill was an attempt to find out the autonomous learning activities of the students for developing their speaking skill and to find out the teacher's role in developing learner autonomy in speaking. The sample size of this research consisted purposively selected 30 students of M.Ed. first Semester of the Department of English education and five teachers who were teaching them. Survey research design was used in this study. Both primary and secondary sources of data were utilized in this research. The data were collected through the use of questionnaire. The collected data were analyzed and interpreted descriptively and statistically. The research finding showed that 93.34% of the students agree to use the computer assisted language learning, 83.34% of the students are using written text, 93.34% of the students are using library, and 83.33% of the students are using language games respectively. These activities plays very crucial role in developing autonomy for improving their speaking skill through the help of group interaction, presentation, role play, simulation, role playing; interview storytelling techniques as the autonomous learning activities. Similarly, the majority of the teachers, i.e. 60% agreed to the role of controller, promoter, resourceful person and tutor to make their students autonomous for developing their speaking skill by their own efforts and potential.

This thesis is divided into five chapters; the first chapter is introductory in nature which deals with background of the study, statement of the problems, significant of study, objectives of the study, research questions and delimitations of the study and operational definition of key terms. The second chapter incorporates review of theoretical literature, review of empirical literature, implications of the review for the study, and conceptual framework and third chapter incorporates design and method of the study, population, sample and sampling strategies, research tools, sources of data, data collection procedures and ethical consideration. Similarly, fourth chapter incorporates analysis and interpretation of the results and summary of the findings and fifth chapter concludes the all.
