ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I wish to express my warm and sincere thanks to my respected teacher and Guide Prof. Dr. Ram Bahadur Chhetri in Department of anthropology/Sociology, TU. His exquisite guidance, constructive criticism, continuous encouragement and inspiration right from the selection of topic to the completion of my work. This work has filled me with great honor and admiration.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Prof. Dr. Om Prasad Gurung, Head of the Central Department Sociology/ Anthropology for his help in allowing me to conduct research in this interesting topic. I wish to express my deep gratitude to Jeevan Mani Poudel, Lecturer in Sociology/Antropology Department, for providing me reading materials and valuable suggestion, care, support and encouragement on climate change.

I cordially express my thanks to the villagers and especially to the respondents of Rajaram Poudel of Lamatar VDC of Lalitpur district and other Villagers for their kind co-operation during field study that provided valuable time to me.

My heartfelt thanks go to my friends Sanjeeb Poudyal and my Mrs. Garima Deuba for providing me the opportunity to study M.A. in anthropology and to all my family members. Again I couldn't leave the name of Rajesh Joshi for providing me final print in his office. Finally, I am indebted to my mother and late father, family & relatives for their continuous encouragement and moral support especially from my elder brother Dhan Bahadur Deuba & many others.

At last, thanking Tribhuvan University as a whole, all the individuals related directly or indirectly to my completion of the thesis.

Prakash Bahadur Deuba
