ABSTRACT

The study entitled 'Multiple Translation of Developmental Literature' was an attempt of the researcher to find out the existing condition of translation work used in developmental literature in terms of translation equivalence, techniques and contextual variation as well as developmental trends in the field of translation. After discussing the important information from different angles, there is minute analysis for imparting new findings. While talking of the tool for research, observation and statement collection process were applied. The finding of the research is based on the information collected from the five developmental literatures available in English and Nepali versions. The major findings of the research show the translation work as one of the technical as well as professional jobs. This study has selected forty developmental terms which are frequently used in five developmental literature with the translated versions. The translations of some developmental terms have no one to one equivalence and some terms have been translated wrongly. There is variation of the same terms while translating the text in different context. It shows the translation is the matter of subjective notion. Every translator can contribute from different angles in the field of translation.

The thesis consists of four chapters. The first chapter consists of introduction, general background, theories of professional development of teachers and general introduction of developmental literature, objectives of the study and the significance of the study. The second chapter deals with the methodology of the research. The sources of information were ten sets of developmental literatures. This chapter presents the limitations of the research, too. The third chapter deals with the rigorous analysis and interpretation of the collected information. The information was analyzed and interpreted by using descriptive approach. The fourth chapter presents the findings and recommendations of this research. References and appendices form the concluding part of the thesis.
