Acknowledgements

I would like to extend my sincere gratitude and thanks to my supervisor, Mr. Saroj Ghimire, lecturer, Central Department of English, Tribhuvan University, for providing me academic suggestions and valuable instructions for the completion of my present desertification work. I am deeply indebted to him. Any attempt to express my gratitude to him in words is bound to be inadequate.

I would like to express my gratitude to Dr. Krishna Chandra Sharma, Head of the Central Department of English, Kirtipur, for my approval of this dissertation in its present form. I am highly indebted to my respected teacher Mr. Sadan Raj Adhikari for providing me constructive guidelines and valuable suggestions. Without their suggestions and instructions, the project wouldn't have been completed.

With due respect, I would like to express my gratitude to my parents for the continuous support and encouragements they provided me to materialize this research work. My special thanks to my friend Prakash Regmi, who, despite his hectic schedule, made himself available to me and shared many ideas regarding the conceptual and theoretical framework of this dissertation. Likewise I would like to offer my deep reverence to my husband, Lokindra Bhattarai who encouraged me for completing this project in time.

Last but not the least, I am very much indebted to my mother Rama Dahal and father Balaram Dahal.

Abstract

The present study is an attempt to analyze the different modes of female exploitations perpetuated economically, mentally and physically from within and outside the family. Marxist feminist insight has been applied as a methodological tool to evaluate the role of protagonist and her exploitations in male dominated capitalist society.
