

CHAPTER - ONE

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of the Study

The Nepalese say "male and female are two wheels of a cart". If we take society as a cart, the role of women in social development is crucial that results in national development as a whole, until women are socially mobilized in our traditional patriarchal society, their participation in different social activities remains nominal. The participation of women in social activities cannot be assured until the attitude of our male dominated society towards their participation in social activities is taken positively (Acharya, 1997).

In Nepal, the status of women in different sectors is miserable in comparison to that of man. The status of women in rural areas is rather upsetting. Women are still victimized by the discrimination, violence, prejudice and inferiority complex because of male domination in different sectors and levels. It has been clear that women's empowerment in society is still nominal. They are not given opportunity in different decisions making activities that makes women's participation in different sectors less important.

Based on census 2011 shows 57.4 percent female literacy in comparison to 75.1 percent of the male and out of the total population of Nepal, nearly 51 percent (1,36,45,463) is occupied by the population of Nepal. In the subsistence -based economy of Nepal women contribute in the area of agriculture but their work is invisible to their families, communities and country. Most of the women are self-employed but their experience and expertise are not recognized by society whether in villages or cities. The life of most women is a struggle against the odds. Women lack self- confidence in their own inherent skills because they are deprived of opportunities in all area of life. If given the chance women will be able to lead with confidence.

Considering the important role of women in national development the government of Nepal included policies to promote women's contribution to national development in the SIXTH FIVE-YEAR PLAN (1981-1985) for the first time. Since 1981, there has been a gradual shift in policy and development such that welfare has become an issue of equity and antipoverty is empowerment. The policies and programs of the government for women, children and social welfare are guided by the constitution of Nepal (1990); the CEDAW convention; BPPA, tenth plan (2003-2007), other bilateral and multilateral agreements and conventions (CRC, Stockholm and Yokohama convention on commercial sexual exploitation of women and children, the 82 and 138 ILO conventions, UNGASS declaration and the SAARC convention on preventing acts and regulations of Nepal. Realizing the need for a separate ministry to deal with the issues of women and social welfare, the government formed the ministry of women and social welfare in 1995. In 2000 it was renamed the ministry of women, children and social welfare.

Women's empowerment is the process of generating and building capabilities of women to exercise and control over one's own life. It is understood to mean the ability of women to make choices to improve their well-being and that of their families and communities. According to the USAID Nepal Women's empowerment as defined by the rural Nepali women is a complex set of conditions, being knowledge skilled and confident, having the ability and willingness to share, time skills and able to speak in public, earn money and generally be able to stand in own feet in the development sectors empowerment of the women are more pronounced as it is the key of women's social, cultural, economic and political development and sustainable growth of the nation. Empowerment refers to increasing the spiritual, political, social, or economic strength of individuals and communities. It often involves the empowered developing confidence in their own capacities (Thomas & Shrestha, 1998).

Mother's groups are perhaps one of the most universalized traditional voluntary organizations in rural Nepal. It first started with the Gurungs of Western Nepal. As most of the Gurung men used to join in the British Army, and more recently, in Indian Army, for the last two centuries, Gurung women formed mother's group to sing, dance, and organize cultural activities in the evening. One of the most interesting activities they perform is to welcome returnee Lahures and guest visitors. Lahures (returnee British or Indian Army Men) and guest visitors donate money to the AamaSamuha (Mother's group). AamaSamuha usually organize singing and dancing programs in the evening and collected money is used to build trails, temples, etc. Many INGOs and NGOs have formed and promoted AamaSamuha across the country among different caste and ethnic groups. The AamaSamuha of Bahun-Chhetri castes have very aggressively raised anti-alcohol movement in the villages (Gurung, 1998).

Those women were organized for cultural social, religious matters and started to convince meetings, discussions and small programs initiated by various NGOs in rural Nepal since 1980s. The affiliation of the rural women towards these issues is as pivotal as that of their male counterparts but still the women have been overlooked. However, the women of Nepal are taking small yet crucial strides in order to make their society a better habitat. And the formation of a social group by the women is one of such steps. The social group has been named as Mother's group "AamaSamuha", which means the group of mothers. The mother group is formed by the women of a certain locality or community so that they can stand united at times of crises (Sharma, 1997).

1.2 Statement of the Problem

In Nepal, most of the rural areas are poverty-ridden. Due to women's low status in comparison to males; it is women and girls who bear the brunt of the hunger, which will certainly have an impact on their health and well-being.

Empowerment is a construct shared by many disciplines and arenas: community development, psychology, education, economics, studies of social movements and organizations. Recent literature reviews of articles indicating a focus on empowerment, across several scholarly and practical disciplines, has demonstrated that there is no clear definition of the concept. Zimmerman (1984) has stated that asserting a single definition of empowerment may make attempts to achieve it formulaic or prescription-like, contradicting the very concept of empowerment. However, for health promotion practitioners, making empowerment operational in health promotion contexts is a crucial issue. Empowerment, in its most general sense, refers to the ability of people to gain understanding and control over personal, social, economic and political forces in order to take action to improve their life situations. It is the process by which individuals and communities are enabled to take power and act effectively in gaining greater control, efficacy, and social justice in changing their lives and their environment. Central to empowerment process are actions which both build individual and collective assets, and improve the efficiency and fairness of the organizational and institutional context which govern the use of these assets.

The very patriarchal culture has restricted women and bounded them inside the four walls of the house. The man is the head of the family and its breadwinner, while the woman is the procreator and housekeeper. Women are assigned to perform household activities like cooking, washing, cattle rearing and looking after the children. As mentioned earlier, it is men in particular kind of society who ensure, construct reinforce and perpetuate the social structure due to the underlying patriarchy and by virtue of this power and control over women, feminists particularly those who held a radical position in feminism and affirmed that "personal is political" argued strongly that "violence against women in necessarily neither a women's issue, nor a feminist one. It is an outcome of patriarchy: therefore it is a men's Issue" (Mishra, 2009:, p.26).

The concept of empowerment traces its history in the mid-17th century with the legalistic meaning; to invest with authority. Thereafter it began to be used with an infinitive in a more general way meaning "to enable or permit." Its modern use originated in the civil rights movement, which sought political empowerment for its followers. This idea of empowerment is an offshoot of the discourse on human development and it came into prominence after 1980s. Its linkage with feminist discourse went a long way in shaping the idea of women's empowerment. However, these concepts are still not clearly defined and demarcated from closely related concept (Tripathi, 2010).

Nepali women are not often seen public life. Their voices are not heard, their work is not valued and their future depends upon the decision made by the male of family, government and communities. They perform food production tasks, house-hold and child caring tasks and carry fuel and water for the family. Women's participation in income generating tasks from house is very low in Nepal. The work done by women in household care and their contribution in agriculture are not considered as economic activity and thus, remain unreported. Women therefore, find themselves as powerless citizens; women's living standards are very low. Many women cannot carry out a decision on their own. Male family members continue to guide women even the energetic and educated women cannot do their work without assistance and guidance of their male guardians. It is the perception that must be changed in Nepal to empower in the work force.

Empowerment as defined Nepal rural women is a complex set of condition, being knowledge, skilled, confident, having the ability and willingness to share time and skills able to speak in public earn money and generally being and generally being to stand on your own feet. Rural women unanimously agree that economic opportunities and literacy art critical to their becoming in empowered. They do not fully comprehend, however the casual relationship between their problems and their limited knowledge of their legal and political right. Empowerment is the process of gaining control over the self, over ideology and the resources, which determine power. To empower women, they need adequate social and economic facilities, employment opportunities, and access to property and wealth, marketing as well as changing the division of labor. Nepalese women need social and economic support from the governmental and non-governmental sectors to achieve women's empowerment

Empowerment is an interactive process which occurs between the individual and his environment, in the course of which the sense of the self as worthless changes into an acceptance of the self as an assertive citizen with sociopolitical ability. The outcome of the process is skills, based on insights and abilities, the essential features of which are a critical political consciousness, an ability to participate with others, a capacity to cope with frustrations and to struggle for influence over the environment (Kieffer, 1984).

The formation of mother group is encouraged by different organizations working in the rural parts of Nepal. A Hangdewa mother's group "AamaSamuha" has 150 members. The group has an executive committee with a chairperson, a secretary, a treasurer and four other members for the group, and the remaining members are designated as members. The chairperson and the member are elected among the members of the group. There is no provision of a specified period of term for the post of the chairperson; they can resign if they want and another person is chosen from the members for the vacant post. Women are still lagging behind in society. Although women's empowerment is society remains unseen, in rural villages women have started empowering themselves through the formation of their own groups-Mother's Group (AamaSamuha). Such groups seem to be playing important role for women's empowerment. Establishment of mothers Group at local level has at least united women for their common goal of increasing their participation in community development. However, such groups are not getting proper support and guidance from the government and community itself. This study has been carried out to answer the following research questions:

1. What is the role of HangdewaAama Samuha (Mother's Group) for empowerment of women and social Development?
2. What are the problems faced by women working in Hangdewa Aama Samuha (Mother's Group)?
3. What implications does Hangdewa Aama Samuha (Hangdewa Mother's Group) make for empowerment of women?

1.3 Objectives of the Study:-

Women of rural areas are making self-efforts to empowering themselves through the formation of Mothers' group (MG) at local level.

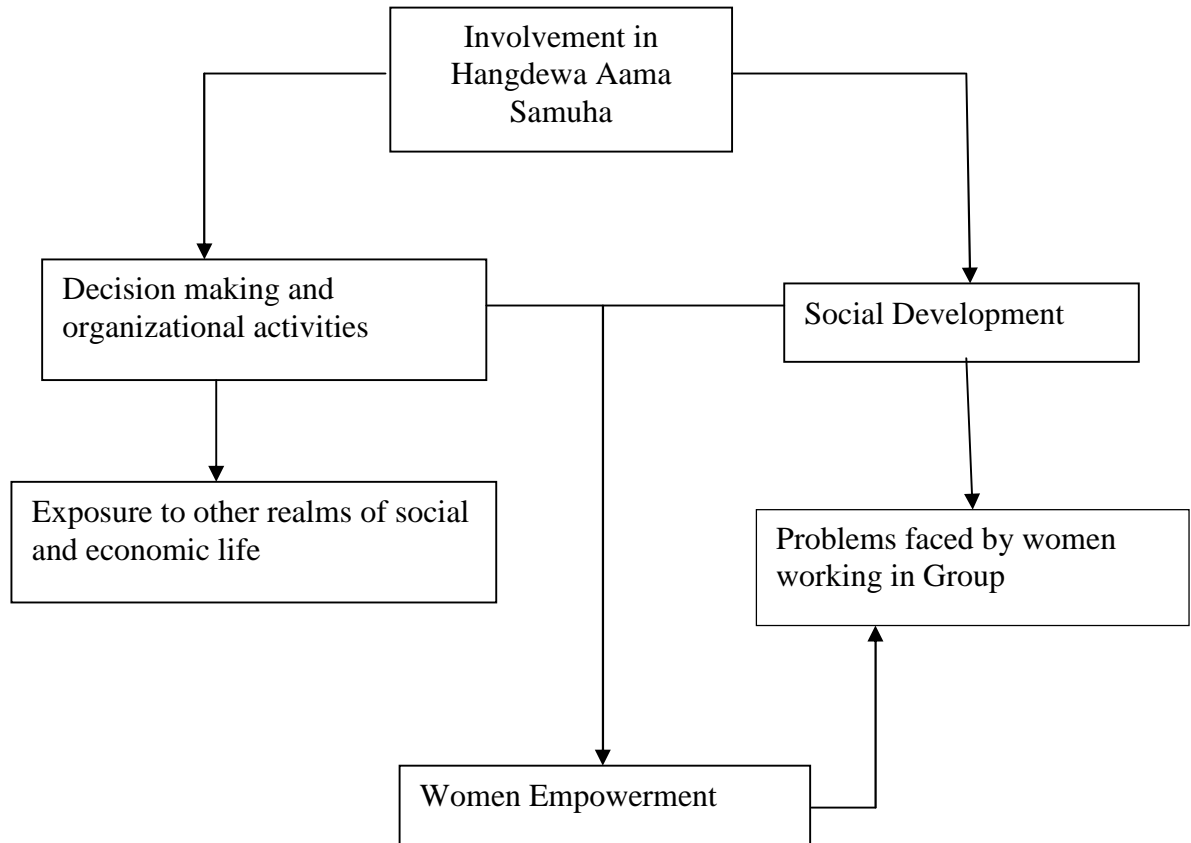

The general objective of this study was to find out the role of mothers group for empowerment of women. Moreover, the specific objectives of the study are as follows:

1. To assess the role of Hangdewa Aama Samuha for empowerment of women and social development.
2. To explain the attitude of male, female and other members of society towards the empowerment of women through Hangdewa Aama Samuha.

1.4 Conceptual Framework

The following conceptual model represents the key elements that shape women's empowerment through Aama Samuha (Mother's Group), which has made the study easier in the interpretation of the findings for the case of HangdewaVDC of Taplejung. The conceptual framework of this study is given below.

Figure 1
Conceptual Framework

1.5 Theoretical Framework

Women's Empowerment Framework (WEF) developed by Sarah Longwe in 1991 has been applied for the purpose of the present study. This framework has been used to assess the extent of empowerment of women, through AamaSamuha (Mother's Group).

Longwe used this framework to help one think through what women's empowerment and equality means in practice. Women's empowerment as defined by Longwe is to enable women to take an equal place with men and to participate equally in the development process in order to achieve control over the factors of production on an equal basis with men. Longwe argues that poverty arises not from (lack of poverty) but from oppression and exploitation.

After the Beijing conference (1995) the issues related to women focused on empowerment, gender equality and mainstreaming of women, many NGO, INGOs have also turned their attention towards such striking issues of women. UNDP (2000) reports that altogether 481 organizations are working in women service only in Nepal.

Women's empowerment approach brings out changes by mobilizing women to become aware of their own traditional subordinate roles and taking action for strengthening women's self-confidence. This is an indicator for the rise of women's self-esteem and increased capacity to interact with world beyond the domestic circle (Acharya 1978: 38) women's empowerment and their full participation on the basis of equality in all spheres of society, including participation in the decision making process and access to power are fundamental for the achievement of equality, development and peace (Beijing Deceleration cited in Hypju 2005: 20)

According to MC Whirter (1991), The process by which people, organizations, or groups who are powerless; (a) become aware of the power dynamics at work in their life context; (b) develop the skills and capacity for gaining some reasonable control over their lives; (c) exercise this control without infringing upon the rights of other; (d) supports the empowerment of others in the community.

1.6 Rationale of the Study

Social exclusion is a process and a state that prevents individual or group from full participation in social, economic and political life and from asserting their rights. It derives from exclusionary relationship based on power (DFID, 2005).

Empowerment of women has been a topic discussed at length in recent times and many strategies have been implemented to address enhance women's condition. The present study is expected to the actual situation of women, before and after joining in mothers group. It has tried to explore how the women are being empowered by formation of the mother's group programs. This study has been equally important for the prospective researchers in the areas of women's issue and their mobilization of society and provide a valid picture and ground reality of women's participation in social activities.

Thus, the findings of the study has been useful for national policy maker, other women organization, NGOs/INGOs and other relevant field in the sense that it has reflected how it is important to promote the legacy of forming such groups for active participation of women in social activities, which ultimately increases the awareness of women in every aspects of country for national building.

1.7 Limitations of the Study

This study has been an academic research conducted as a partial fulfillment of a degree in M.A. in Rural Development. Women empowerment is defined in terms of whether it addresses women's issues as defined in the framework. However, these issues of equality between men and women must be the concern of both women and men.

Due to various constraints of time and cost, I have explored the role of mothers group for women empowerment and social development in the research area. Likewise, the study has been only limited to district.

1.8 Organization of the Study

The study has organized into seven chapters. The first chapter is introduction. The second chapter deals with literature review. The chapter three is about research methodology. The chapter four is about the setting and background of th resppnddents. The chapter five is about the mother group and empowerment of women and similerly chapter is about impact analysis of mother's group and chapter seven is about the summary and conclusion.

CHAPTER-TWO

LITERATURE REVIEW

2.1 Overall Status of Nepalese Women

"Status of women may be defined as to what women, compared with men have access to knowledge, to economic resources and political power". (UN, 1975)

The binary opposition between men and women construct two antithetical sets of characters that position men as superior and women as inferior. This scheme includes dichotomies between rational/emotional, assertive/passive, strong/weak, or public/private. These are strategic oppositions which place men in the superior position of a hierarchy and women in the inferior position, as the second sex (Best and Kellner, 1991). Wherever women are subordinate, and they have been subordinated almost always and everywhere, they seem to have recognized and protested that situation in some form (Lerner, 1993).

Nepalese women are deprived and discriminated in every nook and corners at individual family, society and national level. Women are subordinated and oppressed. They have less access to productive assets. The land, property and credit. They have been deprived of modern education, health, training, household resources and technology. As a result they are lagging behind in every sector of development. Women have unequal position with men at work. They are mainly employed in low grade, low paid jobs. They also have less career building opportunities than males because of gender stereotyping at school and the socializing process. Family is the first institution and school is the second that plays a vital role in child socialization. Women in Nepal, still have less access to decision-making level because they are less educated. The census of 2001 shows 42.5 percent female literacy in comparison to 65.1 percent of the male and out of the total population of Nepal, nearly 51 percent is occupied by the population of women.

According to a preliminary report of "census 2001" presented by central Bureau of Statistics, women outnumber men by over 25 thousand (cited in TKP, 2002). As elsewhere, women in Nepal hold the triple responsibility of reproduction, production and community work.

In general, educated women have higher status in the society and the family size becomes smaller as the education level of the mother rises indeed women's education is low in Nepal and the lowest in SAARC (World Bank, 2004).

After marriage Nepalese women lose their identity. Without the consent of her husband even a single and simple decision is unexpected. A man can do everything: play cards whole day in the teashop, visits the liquor shop or be absent from the house for several days, months or years or may even come back with another wife. This is acceptable to society and culture. However, a woman is strictly prohibited from doing all these things. She is expected to look after children, herd the cattle, take care of cultivation, and cook food and collect fuel and fodder. (Gurung, 1994:, p.40)

According to Acharya 2008, even the social and political leaders have not yet freed themselves from male dominant thoughts. Although LSGA has provision of 20% and 30% women representation in local self- governance and all types of users' groups, district and local level politicians and community leaders show little commitment to addressing gender issues. She further says that the provision for committees and representation in the committees under VDC/DDC do not ensure women's equal representation as an integral part of the system, although it is ensured in the political representation in DDCs and VDCs. The representation of women in various LSG institutions is too low- less than 2% in district councils and less than 10% generally in LSG executive bodies-which is not efficient because they nominated by male.

Nepalese women are one of the most socially and culturally vulnerable groups exposed to discriminations at home due to patriarchal structure to exclusions in the working place due to deficiency in the literacy and skills and marginalization in the decision making process due to lack of executive and polity experience, non-affirmative action's from government and constitutional flaws (Adhikari, 2000).

These literatures deal with about social status of Nepali women and hierarchy of man and women. After the review of these literatures I have analyzed the social status of women after united in the HangdewaAamaSamuha . Like this I have done my research complete finding the opinion of male in this society about the HangdewaAamaSamuha and their programme.

2.2Origin of Mother's Groups

Gurung (1999) explained on his book mother's group is perhaps one of the most universalized traditional voluntary organizations in Nepal. It first started with the Gurung's of western Nepal. As most of the Gurung men used to join in the British Army and more recently, in Indian Army for the last two decades. Gurung women formed mother's group to sing, dance and organize cultural activities in the evening one of the most interesting activities they performs is to welcome returnee Lahures and guest visitors. The lahures (returnee British or India army men) and guest visitors donate money to the Aama Samuha. Aama Samuha usually organizes singing and dancing programs in the evening and collected money is used to build trials temples etc. Many NGOs/INGOs have formed and promoted Aama Samuha across the country among different caste and ethnic groups. The Aama Sumuha of Bahun-chettri caste have very aggressively raised anti-alcohol movement in the villages.

According to Gurung, (1994), before the discussion of mother group, it would be helpful to take a note the "Rodi" a social cultural institution prevalent for centuries among the Gurung of Nepal. "Rodi" (Traditional a centre for weaving and knitting the garment dress-the off-agricultural season) is a place where young boys and girls could entertain themselves by singing and dancing but on the changing perspective of Nepal "Rodi" has been losing its importance and it has been replaced by another creative institution called the "mother groups" The mother groups has been emerging in Nepal mainly in Gurung Villages and Annapurna Conservation area as it has been encouraged by the project.

According to Gurung, 1998 MG started form Gurung community of Gandaki Zone. Annapurna conservation Area project (ACAP) has important role to begin MG.

Gurung (1998: 39 pp) has provided rationales for the emergence of the MG:Women can also do developmental works. Women are not more united till MG is formed. After Forming MG it works for improving the condition of village, for fighting against discrimination to women and mobilize women for development, for making women actively participate in community development, for conducting planned work for the community development, for developing self- confidence, activate and raise awareness in women.

These all article emphasis on the origin of Mother Groups and what is it process. But this study has focused on the How was HangdewaAamaSamuha origin and what is its process.

2.3 Characteristics of Mothers' Groups

Sharma (1997) points out that there are two types of MG: (a). Induced and (b).Self-initiated on the basis of her study in Parbat district. Induced MG means a group of women who were motivated to form a group either by men folk or youths of their communities or by some external organizations to fulfill the latter's objective. Self-initiated MG, on the other hand means those groups where members were inspired to form the group either seeing the activities of other similar groups or hearing about them through other people or through radio, newspaper, etc. In this type of group, mothers themselves select the members after holding intensive discussions with the group. She has listed out following characteristics of mother group: Either self-initiated or induced, Organize locally and work according to group decision and through participatory process, Plan and implement activities independently, Collect and mobilize resources their own, Not totally dependent on external support of daily survival, Benefit members through own efforts and help members in need, Build on existing knowledge, system and capacity, Have no direct affiliation with any political parties, Transparent in their organization, financial and managerial affairs, Not fully capable, qualified and financially sound but have a high potential for improving their condition and qualifications, Work mostly on social reform and community infrastructure development.

Sharma, (1997) says that mothers' groups, historically, were exclusive to the Gurung community. But in recent years, they have evolved as an organization of all castes and ethnicity residing in particular area.

The articles about characteristics of Mother Groups and types of MG. Like this I have explained characteristics of HangdewaAamaSamuha and its type.

2.4 Mothers' Groups in the Community Development

The activities of mother groups are implemented for community development. Such activities have played crucial role to empower women and helped in community development (Gurung 1994 cited in Okanmura, 1999) has pointed out following contributions of MGs in Sayangjadistrict. Construction and repairing of village trails and their surroundings, Construction of Buddhist monasteries and temples, Construction of toilets, Plantation of trees in public lands, Assisting in the construction of school building and furniture, Managing literary classes.

Gurung (1998) has mentioned the following functions of mothers' Groups in the community: Construction and maintenance of road and trails, Cleaning up the trails, Tree plantation, Collection of common utensils, Construction of temple, resting places and monastery, Stopping alcoholism and gambling, Establishment of child care center.

Literature has shown that MGs are evolving and modifying their objectives and goals according to the changing local needs. Initially they started their contribution with community and infrastructure development but now they focus more on social reforms such as discouraging alcoholism, gambling and other social evils (Sharma, 1997).

The rural women have a lot in their plates, such as they have to look after the house, their family and they also have to help in the agriculture as soon as they are done their daily house chores. Despite their schedule they have managed to invest some time in the mother group. This alone is an example of how the rural women are concerned for the development of themselves and eventually the development of the community. The mother group has been encouraged by different organizations so that the women of a certain locality can be brought together against the crises that loom in a village. After the study about the mother groups was carried out in HangdewaVDC, it has been found that the mother groups have been successful in simplifying the life of women to some extent (Zhou et. al 2010). The contribution of the mother groups to the rural women in the rural areas can be summarized as follows:

I. Contribution in Economy

II. Contribution in Health

III. Contribution in Education

IV. Contribution in Development of women and Society

These all article emphasis on how different mother group play role in community development through doing various programs. This study has talked about how Hangdewa Aama samuha play role in community development by doing various Programs.

2.5 The Notion of Empowerment

"Empowerment" is a word widely used but seldom defined long before the word became popular, women were speaking about gaining control over their lives, and participating in the decisions that affect them in home, community, in government and international development policies. The word 'Empowerment' captures this sense of gaining control over their lives, participating and decision making. Recently, the word has entered the vocabulary of development particularly in the case of women development.

Empowerment is a comprehensive process, and is not, therefore, something that can be given to people. The process of empowerment is both individual and collective since it is through involvement in groups that people most often begin to develop the awareness and the ability to organize to take action and bring about change.

At a workshop of pacific women entitled "Women Development and Empowerment" Griffin (1987) spoke about what empowerment means to her" "To me the word simply means adding to women's power -To me power means: Having control or gaining further control Having a say and being listened to Being able to define and create from a women's perspective; Being able to influence social choices and decisions affecting the whole society (not just areas of society accepted as women's place; Being recognized and respected as equal citizens and human beings with a contribution to make; Power means being able to make a contribution at all levels of society and not just in the home; Power also means having women's contribution recognized and valued.

Empowerment is instrumentally important for achieving positive development outcomes and well-being of life which lies in the doing and being what one value and have reason to value i.e. agency. Sen. Make a strong claim for increasing the agency of the individual to enable them to be an effective agent of their own wellbeing and development. The concept of empowerment is very complex in itself indeed very fuzzy also; different scholars hold different definition of empowerment according to the need of their work. Women's agency, autonomy and empowerment are widely used idea in development literature and capability approach. But there exists substantial ambiguity in conception of these ideas. While women's wellbeing and women's agency is sufficiently distinguished from each other, there seems to be a large overlap between agency and empowerment and between agency and autonomy. The present paper examines various conceptions of these ideas to clearly mark the overlapping zones and distinguishing features of respective concepts (Tripathi, 2010).

Individual empowerment is a process of personal development in a social framework: a transition from a feeling of powerlessness, and from a life in the shadow of this feeling, to an active life of real ability to act and to take initiatives in relation to the environment and the future. Community empowerment also includes a definition of a community as a partial, temporary and dynamic unit that originates in the human need for a sense of togetherness and identification with others. Community empowerment can be realized in geographically defined areas that constitute the common critical characteristic of their residents, or it can develop in groups with other common critical characteristics, such as origin, age, gender, or physical disability. The discussion of individual and community empowerment has also touched upon the political meaning of empowerment. The perception of the empowerment process on all its levels as a political process is important to the present study, and is influenced by feminist thought, which accords a new meaning to social change. The group and the community organization are the main means of activating environmental processes. These are the settings which actively connect the individual with his environment and make possible a change which includes the individual, the group, and the environment in the one process (Rappoport, 1987).

In short, empowerment is a process of awareness and capacity building to greater decision making power and control resulting in transformative action.

Empowerment emerged as an important theme in the women's movement for 1975 onwards. In fact, empowerment as a theme arose out of a failure of "Women in Development" (WID) programs, notably the equity approach all of which failed to question the interrelationship between power and development. According to Moser (1993), empowerment approach developed out of dissatisfaction with the original WID as equity approach, because of its perceived co-option into the anti-poverty and efficiency approach.

Empowerment as defined Nepal rural women is a complex set of condition, being knowledge, skilled, confident, having the ability and willingness to share time and skills able to speak in public earn money and generally being and generally being to stand on your own feet. Rural women unanimously agree that economic opportunities and literacy art critical to their becoming in empowered. They do not fully comprehend, however the casual relationship between their problems and their limited knowledge of their legal and political right (Thomas & Shrestha, 1998).

The empowerment approach according to Moser (1993) also puts emphasis on the importance of women increasing their power. It envisages identifying powerless in terms of domination over other, more in terms of capacity of women to increase their own self-reliance and strength. This is identified as the right to make choices in life and to influence the direction of change through the ability to gain control over crucial materials and non-materials resources. Batliwala (1994) also discusses the term power while dealing with empowerment where she sees empowerment as a manifestation of balance of power in terms of resource distribution and change in ideology or ways of thinking.

Women's empowerment and their full participation on the basis of equality on spheres of society, including participation in the decision-making process and access equality, development and place (Beijing Declaration, cited in OCED-DAC, 1998).

Empowerment is the process of gaining control over the self, over ideology and the resources, which determine power. To empower women, they need adequate social and economic facilities, employment opportunities, and access to property and wealth, marketing as well as changing the division of labor. Nepalese women need social and economic support from the governmental and non-governmental sectors to achieve women's empowerment. In her book "Gender Equality and Empowerment" Acharya (1997) viewed the process of empowerment in the context of Nepal as:

- * Increasing women's access to economic opportunities and resources (employment, credit, wealth, technology and non-economic resources, such as education, knowledge and health).
- * Increasing women's political power through women's organizations, solidarity and collective actions (political will and ability to bring about changes in women's legal status to direct resources to women give the access to positions of power).
- * Rising women's consciousness about the symptoms and causes of prevalent oppressive religious, economic, cultural, familial and legal practices.
- * Strengthening women's self-confidence (An indicator for this is the rise of women's self-esteem and increase capacity to interact with world beyond the domestic circle).

In economic empowerment, economic power is considered the basic source of all other kinds of power in society. Batliwala (1994) notes that women's low status is seen to stem from their lack of access and control over economic resources, resulting in dependence and lack of decision-making power. Batliwala (1994), views women's economic powerlessness deriving from a combination of following factors.

- * Gender discrimination, which prevents women from acquiring the education and more remunerative skill, which could make them economically independent.
- * The traditionally socially sanctioned restriction of women to low- skilled and low paid work.
- * Women's lack of access of credit.
- * The "invisibility" and unpaid nature of much of women's work.
- * The majority of women being in the "in organized" or "informal" sector of the economy, where they are socially and economically vulnerable.

Studies regarding "women's Role in Economic Development (Boserup, E. 1970) revealed that women have often been victims of development programs rather than beneficiaries.

Many development programs that were assumed to benefit everybody really benefited men only and negative effects not only on women but on the whole community. The high rate of failure of government's development programs and policies is attributable at least in part to neglect or lack of knowledge of women's productive roles.

Women empowerment means "the idea that giving women power over their economic, social and reproductive choices which will raise their status promote development and reduce population growth". Women empowerment can be viewed as a continuum of components:

- * Awareness building about women's situation discrimination, and rights and opportunities as a set towards gender equality. Collective awareness building provides a sense of group identity and power of working as a group.
- * Capacity building and skills development, especially the ability to plan make decision organize, manage and carry out activities to deal with people and institutions in the world around them.
- * Participation and greater control and decision making power in the home, community, and society.
- * Action to bring about greater equality between men and women. (Rao and Kumari, 2005:,pp. 24-25)

"Opinion provided by Mr.Karki, husband of MG

Treasure PabitraKarki (Name changed)"

"I had realized much more differences in my wife's behavior after her involvement in MG. Before getting involved in MG, she was also limited within household activities although she had some probability of doing something if she got an opportunity. Later, her desires were fulfilled through MG. She fostered her inner capability to speak out clearly and with confidence in front of mass. She developed social feelings. She makes decision on sole household activities that are not only reasonable but also rigid. Now she has also represented 'many social institutions like community forest user's group, Aashan Party Women Saving and Credit Group, school management committee etc. She has established her own prestigious position in the society as a result of her involvement in MG.

All of the male respondent opined that female also should be given the right of equality as both male and female are two parts of the same coin. More than 30 percent of total male interviewee argued that the women lagged behind men mainly because they gave the first priority to household activities than participated in social activities if they could manage their time. 50 percent male regarded illiteracy of the mothers and discriminatory social structure against them as the main causes behind their backwardness in the society and 20 percent male said that mothers were more enthusiastic to participate in social activities and social organization but the lack of their interest in attending knowledgeable programs. More than out of interviewed 70 percent of the male satisfied with MG social activities and social reform regarding drinking and gambling and social evils.

They also had some training on livestock (goat keeping, pig keeping) accountancy, institutional development, gender equality, sanitation, nutrition, human right etc. As a result, they seemed to have been more enthusiastic to get involved in such groups rather than MG. And 33 percent mothers were involved in only their household activities like collecting and cooking meals, cleaning house, washing clothes, caring children, so they werenot involved in MG because of maximum busy in household activities, lack of family support, lack conveying message regarding benefit by participation in MG and lack of education. Environment in their village, MG had been successful in uniting mothers for social work and keeping peace and harmony in the community.

CHAPTER - SIX

IMPACT ANALYSIS OF MOTHERS' GROUP

6.1 Changes in Social Status

As the information gathered from mothers, before the formation of the MG, mothers were untouched and unaware with the outer world .They were found to be aware of their position and role in the society after its establishment. They are full of enthusiasm and always willing to do something for their families and society. They were preparing themselves to fight against obstacles. They got knowledge and skill development. According to them, they have been successful, to greater extent, to change the traditional concept prevailing in the society that women can't do anything in social development. But that concept has been changed when mothers started performing social activities. Mothers have also cultivated social feeling.

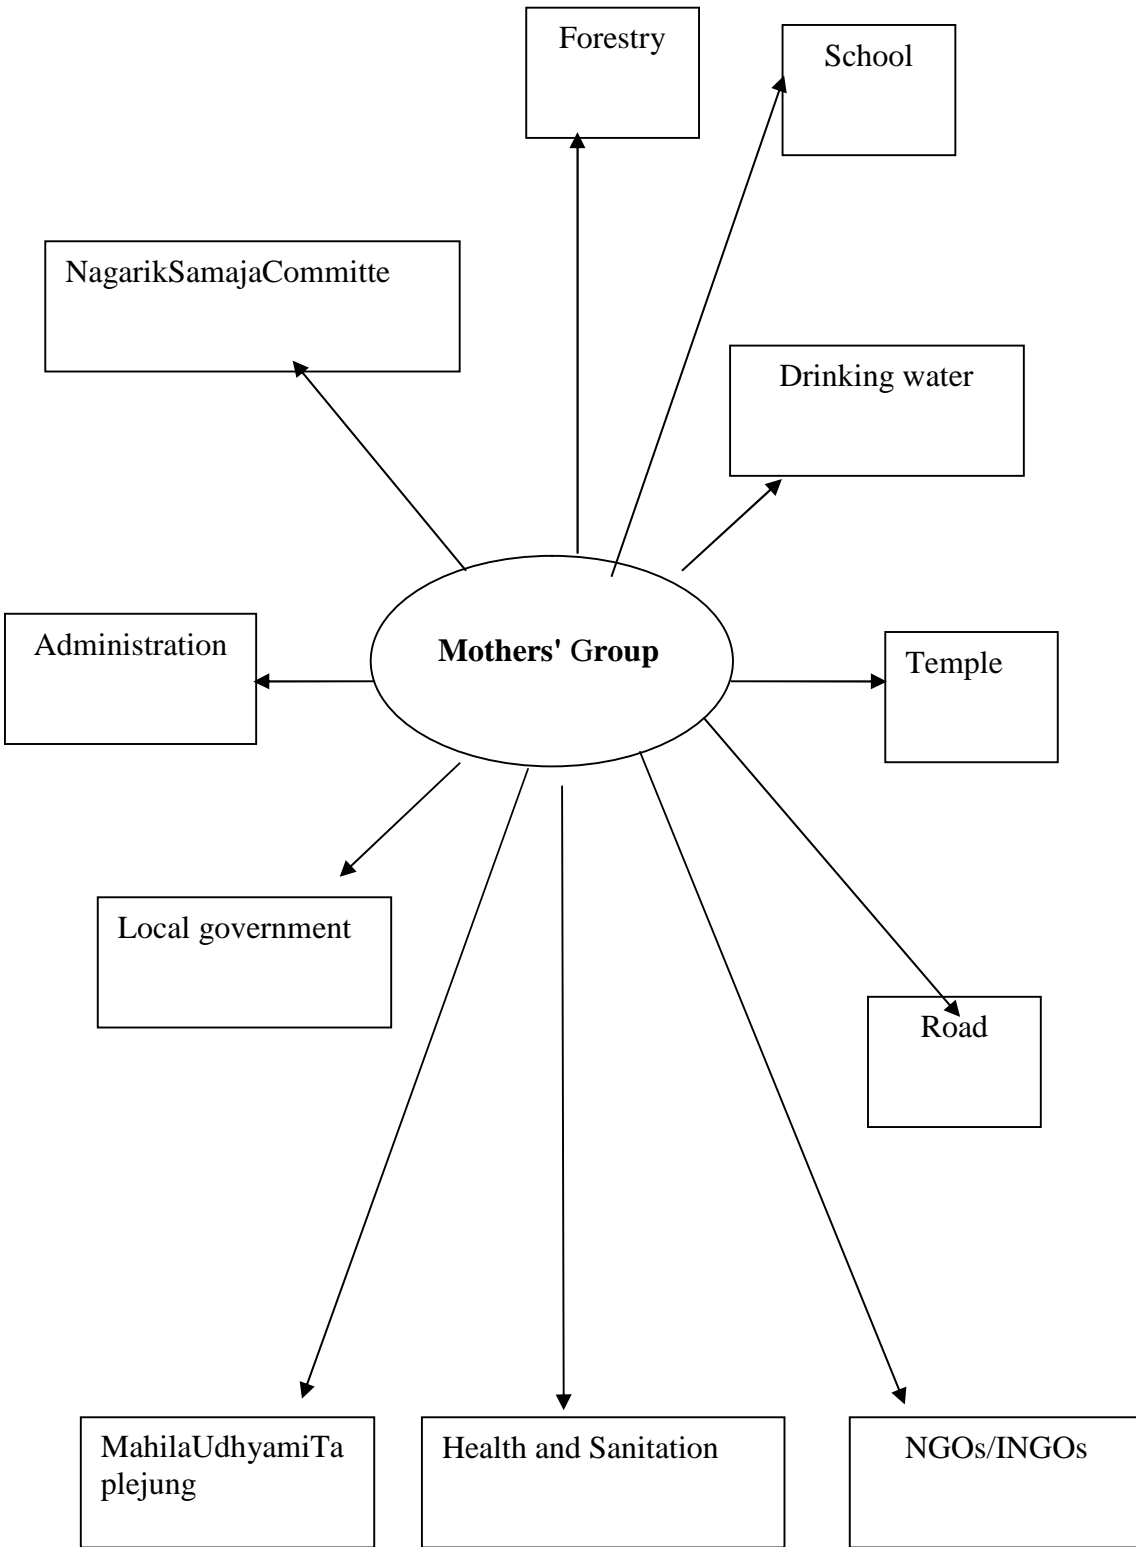

Before involving in the MG, their social relationship and contacts were limited within household. But After getting involved in the MG, their social relationship, level of contact has extended. MG activities and training were able to fight against the traditional value, and they felt proud, confident and prestigious in the society. Mothers have increased social status and power, a source of empowerment.

6.2 Involvement in Social Activities

After getting involved in the MG, they were interested to join other social institution and program. In response to the question whether they got involved in social activities or not, 65 percent of mothers responded that they had been involved in social activities representing social institutions like, forest user's group, school management committee, temple management committee, road construction committee and drinking water supply management committee, civil sosaity (Nagariksamaj) committee etc. Mothers group has relationship with various agencies and institutions. The figure below shows the relationship between MG and others local institutions.

Representing social institutions like forest user group, school management committee, temple management committee, road construction committee, drinking water supply committee, and other local institution like, local government, polices, NGO/INGO and health related organization etc.

6.3 Decision-Making Capabilities

Decision-making capabilities of members were found to be highly depended upon the family background of the members. The mothers from nuclear family were found to have much more opportunities to make decisions than the members from joint family 84 percent (76 mothers), of the members were from nuclear family. Among them, 55 percent (50 mothers) of the members made decisions jointly with their husbands except in kitchen maintenance like making decision on schooling of their children, buying clothes, etc. But the members from joint family, they were found to be hardly involved in decision-making process. Among 16 percent (14 mothers) members, only 20 percent (3 mothers) members said that they are also consulted making decisions on major issues like buying, selling house, land etc.

After getting involved in MG, they had felt significant changes in their decision-making. Nearly 70 percent (63 mothers) said that there has been change in the pattern to decision making. They said that before joining the groups, they used to limit their decision only in the kitchen maintenance but, after getting involved in MG, they analyzed the issue logically and sometimes they disagreed the decisions made by others and gave their own decision. They also said that there is change in their self-confidence, behavior, knowledge, communicating skill etc. after getting involved in MG. By getting the training and link with different people mother got more knowledge and increased the power of leadership, that helped them to make decision on their risk either that were on household or on public issues.

6.4 Changes in Attitude of Family Members and Neighbors

Involvement in mothers group and in income generating activities and social activities had changed their attitude of family members and their neighbor. Their occupation, public life, saving, mobility knowledge and confidence had changed their family members and neighbor's concepts towards them. It was found that 70 percent (63 mothers) of the members have felt change in the attitude of family members towards them. They said that due to the organizational practice in MG, training, access to new knowledge and skill they have become more confident to talk on any issues. They started getting themselves involved in household decision making. Which has made the family members (especially husband) to realize their role in the family. Amongthem 33 percent (30 mothers) have felt change in the attitude of their neighbor because of the increment in their confidence level and involvement in social activities. But 20 percent (18 mothers) members did not feel any changes of their family members and neighbors towards them because of their low access to the opportunities like training, social activities etc.

7.2 Conclusion

Empowerment of women and rural development go together. Mothers of rural areas are getting organized and making efforts to empower themselves by the name of mothers group. Mothers groups have played vital role for women empowerment and developing social awareness of mothers. MGs have provided a safe platform for mothers to exercise power relationship within organization, enhance their communicational skills, share personal feelings and experience there by learn something new, that helps them change the traditional concepts prevailing in the society on their role and responsibilities, to increase their confidence level because of their access to new information, knowledge and skill, which in turn enhance their capability to increase their participation in local institution.

Mother's group members are actively involved in antiliquor campaign and fight against atrocities on women etc. MG members are interviewed about their group activities and changes in the living standards of the members. The various factors like income generated from group activity income from other sources, family assets, family size, savings and repayment of the loans are taken into consideration to find out the changes in the living standards of the MG members. These factors are treated for the purpose of the study as indicators of economic empowerment. The social aspect of the group activities was taken for study. The social aspects of the MG activities like, training, management of group, functioning social activities and financial support etc. are studied by deriving the data about the number of group meeting attended and about the formation of the group etc. for the purpose of the study as indicators of social empowerment.

After getting involved in MG, mothers were able to defend social evils and male domination against women. It was a great change in their perspective, attitude, authority, prestige, knowledge, ability and social relationship and training program had helped in building self-confidence among the members. The caste and ethnic group have equal participation in executive committee members and general members of mothers group of Hangdewa. However, all the mothers had not progressed at same level mothers from nuclear family were much empowered than the mothers' from joint families. One of the important conclusions of the study was that the MG activities have been helping the poor women in economic and social development. The capacity of women leaders to communicate with other women was seen as an important factor in helping the development of women. Conclusively, through the different activities of mothers group the involved members have gained confidence and this had led them to the path of empowerment.
