ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis which supplements the partial fulfillment for the completion of Master degree in Sociology from Tribhuvan University was learning for me indeed. Media is supposed to be a difficult profession as many people term it as an odd-hour profession. In the social context like Nepal, women journalists are significantly increasing across the country. Though undermining culture still persists in our society, I reached the conclusion that the women involvement in media could be analyzed through sociological perspective with different dimensions.

I have tried my best to explore the matter. The completion of this dissertation was possible with the help of many cooperative individuals who supported me directly or indirectly.

I am grateful to Madhusudan Subedi for his monitoring and guidance during the course of accomplishing this thesis. Similarly, Narayan Bibas, Ajaya Gautam, Bigyan Sharma and Lenin Banjade are the names that I should not forget to mention due to the help they did during the research.

I hope this study will be useful for anyone who wishes to research in the similar field. I am ready to rectify the errors if suggested.

Bandana Sharma
