ABSTRACT

This thesis entitled "Effectiveness of Context as a Resource for Teaching Vocabulary" is an effort to find out the effectiveness of context as a resource for teaching vocabulary. Forty students studying in grade 11 from one of the higher secondary school of Baglung district were the sample for this study. Before starting teaching using context, the students were pre-tested to determine their level and understanding of vocabulary. After analyzing the scores of pre-test, real teaching was started. After teaching for four weeks, the post test was conducted. The test items of both tests were same. The result of pre-test and post-test were analyzed to determine the effectiveness of context as a resource for teaching vocabulary. The findings of this study showed that using context as a resource for teaching vocabulary is found more effective. The pre test result of experimental group showed that the students scored only 547. The average score in the pre-test was 27.3. The students in the post test scored 763. The average score in the post test is 38.15 which is greater than that of pre-test. Likewise the controlled group also increased average scores in the post test in comparison to the pre test. But increased percentage of experimental group is greater than controlled group. Thus it proves that teaching vocabulary using context as a resource is more effective.

This thesis has four chapters. The first chapter deals with the general background of the study, review of related literature, objectives and significance of the study'. The second chapter includes the research methodology, sources of data, sampling procedure and limitation of the study. Chapter three deals with analysis and interpretation of collected data and the chapter four presents findings and recommendations of the study. This chapter is followed by the references and the necessary appendices.
