Acknowledgement

First of all, I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude to Dr. Krishna Bahadur Bhattachan, lecturer of Department of Sociology, Tribhuvan University and Mr. Jagat Bahadur Basnet, the Deputy Director of New ERA Kalopul for taking the responsibility to supervise the thesis. All through this study both of them extended me warm affection and guided the work with meticulous care and scholarly supervision. Both of their tireless reading of various drafts of the thesis and both of their comments and suggestions made possible for me to finalize the work in time. I owe a debt to both of them for all the supports to which I will not be able to pay back ever.

My warm respect goes to my parents and my family members for their constant encouragement, and cooperation for the entire period of my study. My heartfelt thanks go to my dearest mom for the unflinching support for higher education and in completion of this research.

I am particularly grateful to my friend Mr. Shankar Kumar Bhatta who supported me in preparation of this thesis with valuable suggestions, advice, constructive comments and proof reading in finalizing the thesis.

Similarly I would also like to express my thanks to my sisters Anju, Ranju and Sanju, Brother Sharad G.Raj, Santosh Ramdam for their help and encouragement. All the people who helped me in the field by providing field information as and when necessary deserve my special thanks.

I will be falling in my duty if I do not express my thanks and gratitude to the people who assisted me in the field work process and to those people who without hesitation responded to my questions and took part in hour-long group discussion.

I am grateful to many organizations and individuals who have contributed directly and indirectly for the publication of this thesis.

Finally, I express my gratitude to New ERA kalopul for awarding me with Dr. Hark Gurung Fellowship, which helped me not only financially but also guided methodologically for the fulfillment of my thesis.
