ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Investors and financial instruments are the very important and crucial part of capital market. Development of security market in the present global scenario requires restructuring of the current market operation system and policies so that the transparency and credibility of the market can be maintained. For this to attain investors psychology towards financial instruments and their opinion as to the present policies should be explored and understood. This research, in this regard, may be of one of the important product.

I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to my thesis supervisor Rishi Raj Gautam who provided me with valuable inputs, essential guidance and constructive suggestions to accomplish this thesis in desired time.
