Acknowledgements

First, I want to extend my sincere gratitude to Dr. Krishna Chandra Sharma, Head, Central Department of English for offering me a chance to carry out this research. I also owe my gratitude to Dr. Arun Gupto, without whose kind cooperation and guidance, the work would have remained incomplete.

I must also thank Mr. Bal Bahadur Thapa, who provided me precious support with materials and suggestions. I most say thank to the respected teachers; Prof. K.B. Gurung, Mr. Badri Acharya and Mr. Puspa Raj Acharya, who taught and suggested me to prepare proposal in the beginning of the research.

At the same time, I must express infinite thanks to all the teachers at the Central Department of English, T.U., Kirtipur at present who helped me in different ways in the course of my study.

I am much indebted to my parents and to my dear brother Mr. Som Nath Adhikari for their lifelong inspiration. Thanks for sisters Shramila and Sushma who helped differently to carry out this work. Likewise, I am too much beholden to my dear wife Mrs. Kalpana Aryal for her continuous support.

Last but not least, I am thankful to Mr. Thamkaraj Basaula and Mr. Bishnuhari Adhikari for their valuable support.

Abstract

Robert Frost's poems reflect the world of nature as an organic whole. His bio-centric vision of nature captures the internal bond between human and elemental world. There is a kind of intricate web among the elements of the natural world along with human beings. Frost has shown the interplay between all ingredients of nature to oppose utilitarian value that has caused modern environmental degradation. The communion and interconnection between man and nature are enhanced by locating human being as a part of sanctified world of nature. Frost's poems are eco-effects as they are composed by inspiration of ecology with ecological awareness. Frost has presented nature as a transforming force, which tends to create activity and knowledge and behind which lies a deep ecological consciousness.
