Acknowledgement

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisor, Mr. Govinda Bhattraï, Central Department of English, Tribhuwan University, for the existence of my present dissertation work. It has been his scholarly guidance and valuable suggestion and that have made this project a reality. I am deeply indebted to him. Any attempt to express my gratitude to him in words is bound to be inadequate. I am also obliged to the Department Head Dr. Krishna Chandra Sharma for the approval of this dissertation in its present form.

My special gratitude goes to my friends Mr. Manoj Kr. Gautam, Mr. Krishna Pd. Dhakal, Mr. Surya Dhakal and my brother Prakash Bashyal for their continuous support and encouragement without which my dream to be a research student would have remained unrealized. To them I can only acknowledge here.

Finally I am to Mr. Bikash Bhandari, manager of the College of Software Engineering, Parasi Branch and the unit of technicians for typing and other technical support to support my research.

Abstract

On the surface of it T. S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral seems to be a classical drama only significant to the spectators of twelfth and thirteenth centuries, from where the plot of the play comes. But a closer analysis of Dialogue, Characters and Setting reveals the play to be a significant one for the people of twentieth century living in between two world wars, the time this play was written. Some of the characters in the play resemble modern people and play important role in the play. They speak a language of twentieth century balancing their poetic dialogue but not Norman French or other twelfth century languages. And finally the play is set implicitly in twentieth environment despite its explicit religious setting. So, this play has significance in among the spectators of twentieth century.
