Acknowledgements

In carrying out this dissertation I have been helped and encouraged exuberantly by a number of eminent teachers, colleagues and friends. Undoubtedly, my greatest obligation, in the organization, development and shaping of this work is to my thesis guide Mr. Saroj Ghimire, Lecturer of Central Department of English, Tribhuvan University. It is with the sincere blessing of him that I could start the work and I have been enjoying his benevolent patronage and help throughout its course in many ways.

I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to Prof. Chandra Prakash Sharma, Head of the Central Department of English, T.U. Kirtiupur, for genuinely inspiring and patiently enlightening me to take up this research in a serious vein. I am highly indebted to my respected teachers Prof. Dr. Abhi Subedi, Dr. Beerendra Pandey, Devi Gautam, Bishnu Sharma, and Tika Lamsel for providing me constructive guidelines and valuable suggestions. Similarly I seize this opportunity to thank my friends Bharatmani, Sunil and Hari for their continuous help.

Finally I would like to thank my most lovely parents Giriraj and Bhagawati, brother Jagannath, sisters Pabitra and Sharmila, and Nutan for their many sided help in this arduous journey from a world of hazy to the present point of relative assurance.

At last I would like to remember all the staffs and friends of Melamchi Water Supply Development Board (MWSDB), Baneshwor, for their help and many sided support to this research work.

Abstract

While narrating the story of The Great Gatsby, Nick Carraway, the narrator of the novel clearly distances himself from the other characters representing other classes, cultures race and ethnicity. He, the product of white cultural background and mentality is conscious about his own belongingness which forms and develops colonialist and hegemonic view over others as well as that bars him from promoting mutual bond with the characters representing other cultural and social background. The narrator, Nick renders the intellect of all western white colonizers and in the name of telling story he presumes colonialist ideology throughout the length and breadth of the novel.
