ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First of all, I am extremely indebted to my research supervisor Dr. Chiranjibi Nepal, Central Department of Economics, Tribhuvan University for generous encouragements and undertaking of the supervision of my entire research work. This form of the report is the outcome of his continuous encouragement, helpful suggestions and comments.

I am also extremely indebted to all of my respected teachers in the Central Department of Economic for providing me an excellent theoretical knowledge in economics and inspiring to go on with this dissertation work.

My sense of respect goes to my mother Mrs. Rama Devi for their regular encouragement and help in every steps of my life, friends and relatives who inspired me to study economics and offered their help. I fully appreciate my older brother, Ram Prasad, and older brother's wife, Durga for their co-operation and lovely family environment in my study. I am also greatly obliged to all those who helped me directly and indirectly.

Finally, special thanks to sister's son, Kamal Gaudel and Mrs. Tara Laxmi Maharjan for splendid word processing and printing of this document.
